THE KNOXVILLE WHIG. Knoxville, Tenn., September 6, 1865.

To the Voters of the Second Congressional District of the State of Ten-

trict, preferred my election, and favored the policy of the house. and principles I advocated. A full, fair and untransmelled expression of popular sentiment would have sent me to Congress by a large majority. But that kind of an expression, as I foresaw would be the case, was not, and under the circumstances, could previous elections, exhibit a great falling off in the vote of the counties, and I may safely say that more than half of those entitled to the elective franhise either did not exercise it, or cast their suffrages for men whose election they did not desire. I have information of numerous instances where my warm personal and political friends were in a manner forced to vote against me. Persons exposed to dangers, or threatened with or apprehensive of personal violence, will sometimes purchase peace at the cost of personal and political independence.— It is true the bayonets were not at the polls, but a worse than military influence was there—a mob-terrorism and fear of violence. Hundreds and thousands, I am satisfied, were in this manner deterred from going to the election at all, and many constrained to vote against their predilections. It loyal people of East Tennessee are in favor of the policy of personal outrage and violence, or of negro suffrage and negro equality. The great majority love law and order, and prefer that personal wrongs shall be redressed through the regular and largitudes of the control of the regular and largitudes of the regula egitimate channels of the courts of the country. A very large majority are utterly opposed to taking the right of suffrage from the white man and conferring it upon the negro, and believe that this country and government-its Constitution, Laws, and depublican institutions were made and intended for the white race. A large majority, now that the rebellion is suppressed and the idea of a Southern Confederacy exploded, are desirous of restoring the original order of things-the institution of slavery of course excepted,-and of starting again the old ship of State upon calm and prosperous seas. I am not in favor with certain powers that be, in Tennessee, and the effort has been made to place me under political ban, because I do not favor a continual and unnecessary disturbance of the social and political elements, the natural tendency of which is only to keep us forever in social and political storms In this, however, I have the satisfaction to know

We went to war to preserve the political partner-ship existing between all the States comprising the American Union, and which the Southern States, in their madness and folly attempted to dissolve.—
We won; and the South, with commendable philosophy, has submitted to the logic of events. They consider the issue of secession as forever settled, and are willing, and to considerable extent, anxious to come again under the government of the Union. Now, what more can, or ought we to ask or desire, except that the South shall continue faithfully to observe the compact of Union? 'Can this be most successfully and satisfactorily accomplished by making the Southern people hate the Union and feel that they have no part or lot, no rights and liberties in it? If it be desirable to keep alive the fires of secession and disunion, and to retard our national prosperity and progress, it is only necessary to destroy the connection between Union and liberty, and make the fermer a symbol of oppression to any that I stand in company with a large majority of the people of the State and my own immediate dis-

one section of the country. Our President, in consonance with the usage of civilized nations and the wise and well recognized maxims of humanity, moderation and honor, governing all high-toned and christian rulers, has proclaimed annesty upon liberal terms to those en-gaged in the late rebellion. "When an amnesty is sublished and accepted," we are told by internation al law writers, "All the past must be buried in oblivion." I am therefore opposed to tearing open the old national wounds and causing the body politic to bleed again at every pore. To heal those wounds from which during the last four years, rivers of precious bleed bere presented in the control of the control ers of precious blood have poured out to redden our land, it is necessary only to withhold all undue irritants, every cause of disturbance and dissatisfaction, except such as may be absolutely requisite to maintain the national dignity and secure the national integrity. Placing the negro on a level with, or indeed, in superiority to the white man; redress of personol grievances; all undue and unusual severity in the laws, and a system of wholesale indictments and confiscation are not necessary either to conserve the national integrity or promote the national honor. The flames of discord and civil war, are not favorable to the administration of pure and sacred jus- ted haviour of the visage," have daily importuned

I am happy to know that my State has expressed agreement with me in sentiment on these subjects. The people have, with one or two exceptions, elected bring to the discharge of their official duties, a full measure of ability and patriotism. I regret my own defeat only as a defeat of the wishes and principles of a majority of my fellow-citizens, who, from the causes before mentioned, were prevented from exercising their rights as freeman. Time and a returning sense of justice, I hope, will set all
